

BUCK'RAM (OF. boquerant, bouqueran, in popular etymology later referred to buck, Ger. Bock, goat). A coarse linen or cotton cloth, sized with glue. It is used as a stiffening in making clothing and also in bookbinding. The name was originally applied to a more costly material, which was used for ecclesiastical purposes and for garments.